KAPP RESIGNS GERMAN RULE TODAY

SOVIETS HOPE TO GAIN FOOT HOLD IN CHAOS

NEW REGIME SEES FUTILITY OF ATTEMPTING TO HOLD POWER AGAINST SOCIALISTS

(By Associated Press)
The Kapp administration at Berlin realizes the futility of attempting to hold the reins of power and has decided to give up its short lived dictatorship. At 1:00 o'clock this afternoon, Berlin time, Chancellor Kapp decided to resign, according to an official advice from the German capital.

Radicals Active
The forces of extreme radicals are asserting themselves in various German centers. There are increasing Spartan disorders, growing talk from the role of the possibility of utilizing the present disabled condition to establish Soviet rule.

The list of killed reported from numerous German towns and cities in clashes between demonstrators and troops is running into the hundreds.

Report Battles
There has been no direct confirmation of last night's report of 400 killed in the bombardment of Kiel by warships but there are apparent veracious reports of 100 killed and 300 wounded at Dresden, probably more than 100 killed in Berlin suburbs and killing of one half dozen to a score of persons in other of the twenty-four or more German centers where clashes have been reported.

Expressions of confidence in the speedy restoration of the Ebert government to complete control came from the headquarters of that government in Stuttgart.

Minister of Defense Noske is quoted as declaring he expects with the aid of his troops to secure the return of normal in six or eight days.

Paris, March 17—News from Berlin and other German points telling of clashes at Essen, Leipzig, Mannheim, Frankfurt and Brunswick together with the report that the council workmen had assumed power at Chemnitz has given the impression here that there is more to be feared from revival of the Spartan movement than from activities of the Kapp government in Berlin.

LITTLETON CLOSING NEWBERRY DEFENSE

PUTS UP LONG PLEA TO JURY ASKING FREEDOM OF SENATOR

(By Associated Press)
Grand Rapids, Mich., March 17—M. W. Littleton of New York, today closed the case for the Senators in the Newberry election conspiracy trial, pleading for some three hours with the jury which is to decide the guilt or innocence of Senator Truman H. Newberry and 84 other state political leaders. The day's proceedings opened with the conclusion of the pleas which J. O. Murphy, chief counsel for the defense, stated yesterday. J. W. Hillman, democrat defense, repeated largely the arguments presented at the opening of the trial and the principal statements he gave on the stand only as a combination attorney and witness for himself he swore that he had no connection whatever with the Newberry organization.

Had Long Plea
Littleton followed, his time extending until 3:00 p. m. at which hour final summing up government starts, with Frank Daly, special assistant attorney general in the role of last orator.

Get Case Friday
It was understood this morning that unless Attorney Daly concludes by tomorrow noon Judge Sessions will not instruct the jury until Friday morning. The jury would put the case in their hands about noon that day.

ASKS BERGDOLL BE GIVEN THIRTY YEARS

(By Associated Press)
New York, March 17—Grover Cleveland Bergdall, who is being court-martialed for failure to report for military service under the draft offered no defense today. His counsel stated the government's failure to establish its case. Lieut. Col. C. C. Cresson, asked that a sentence of 30 years' imprisonment be imposed.

HOLD LARGE CROWDS AT LENTEN SERVICES

REV. ROCKSTROH PREACHES TO FILLED CHURCH TUESDAY

Rev. Rockstroh preached on "Jesus and Peter" at the third of the Lenten services at the First Moravian church Tuesday evening, when a congregation which well-filled the church listened to the sermon. The chorus choir lead in the singing, which was very spirited and enthusiastic.

The text of Rev. Rockstroh's sermon was taken from Matthew XXVI of verse 58, "Peter followed Him Afar Off". Subject: "The Denial."

Interesting Sermon.
The preacher asked his audience to concentrate their thoughts upon Jesus and his passion; to recall Jesus suffering in the garden and his suffering from the betrayals and to realize how bitter and heart rending it must have been to have the great betrayal followed by the great denial. Judas betrays his Master with a kiss. Peter denies him with an oath, he told his listeners. Rev. Rockstroh followed with a word picture of the Denial, which showed Peter interestingly human, ardent, confident, hopeful, impressive, impulsive, warm hearted, but when the trail came he failed, the speaker explained, "because he followed Jesus afar off; because he would not watch and pray; because he made himself comfortable amidst the enemies of the Lord."

The climax of the sermon was reached in the recitation of a Hymn as a prayer: "In the hour of trial, Jesus' plead for me; Lest by base denial, I depart from Thee. When Thou seest me waver, with a look recall, Nor for fear or favor suffer one to fall."

Rev. Reinke speaks tonight on, "Jesus and Caiaphas."

GET CENSUS OF STEVENS POINT

GIVE NEIGHBORING CITY INCREASE OF THIRTY PERCENT IN TEN YEARS

The population of Stevens Point is 11,370 people according to the official figures from Washington which have been received there. This is an increase of 30.8 percent over the figures of ten years ago.

1910 Misleading
The 1910 census was taken at a time when the city was on the brink of a new era of prosperity and growth, signaled in July of that year by the return of the Soo line division from Abbotsford. The city had suffered greatly from the removal of the Wisconsin-Central shops to North Fond du Lac and the division point to Abbotsford, and when the Soo line, successor to the Wisconsin Central decided to re-locate the division in Stevens Point there was great rejoicing. Directly or indirectly the return of the division greatly stimulated the growth of the city, but there were other factors which contributed to this growth and development, notably industrial expansion.

Place Figures Higher
Estimates of the present population of Stevens Point ranged as high as 13,500 and it was generally believed the figure would be in excess of 12,000. Those who made these estimates pointed out that in 1910, prior to the return of the division, empty houses were to be found in all parts of the city, while not long afterward practically all available houses were filled. Since then hundreds of additional houses have been erected and at the present time the housing situation is acute.

A comparison of the census figures for Stevens Point this year and in past years follows:

1920.....	11,370
1910.....	8,692
1905.....	9,022
1900.....	9,524
1895.....	8,995
1890.....	7,896
1885.....	6,510

*State census.

Wausau Gains
The figures received thru the Associated Press today give the population of Wausau 18,061, or an increase of 2,204 over the last official census. The increase is 12.7 percent. The census figures of Milwaukee as given by the Associated Press are 157,147 or an increase of $1,290 over the former figures, an increase of 22.3 percent over the former official figure.

SEN. LENROOT HAS NEW RESERVATION

WISCONSIN LAW MAKER SUGGESTS SUBSTITUTE FOR ARTICLE

(By Associated Press)
Washington, March 17—The new reservation drafted by Senator Lenroot declared the United States would view "with grave concern any threat against the peace of Europe and would consider what action it would take with the premises." While not many members of the administration had had an opportunity to study the reservation and its effect some senators predict that its adoption would palliate resentment over the reservation to article 10, which President Wilson has declared would "cut the heart from the league of nations."

Debate has forestalled efforts to agree for a ratification vote.

COUNTY PATROL MEN APPOINTED

TWENTY-SEVEN GET APPOINTMENTS FROM COUNTY FOR COMING ROAD SEASON

County Highway Commissioner Edw. Morris, has announced the appointment of 27 road patrol men, the appointments to take effect immediately. Those selected on the Trunk Lines are: No. 1, E. E. Tracy, R. R. 8; No. 2, William Withers, city; No. 3, Julius Kruger, R. R. 7; No. 4, Joe Joosten, R. R. 4; No. 5, O. L. Olson, Vesper; No. 6, Gus. Hause, Arpin; No. 7, Nick Schill, Auburndale; No. 8, Charles Feit, Milladore; No. 9, Otto Leddin, Auburndale; No. 10, John Benke, Marshfield; No. 11, Joe Regal, Marshfield.

County Patrols
The county patrols have all been appointed with the exception of No. 4, which is to be filled immediately. Those appointed are: No. 1, C. W. Benner, Nekosia; No. 2, Robert Scott Babcock; No. 3, H. C. VanWormer, Babcock; No. 4, vacant; No. 5, H. L. Huser, R. R. 3; No. 6, L. E. Miller, Dexterville; No. 7, Orson Bean, Vesper; No. 8, Carl J. B. Garrels, Pittsville; No. 9, Jens Jensen, Pittsville; No. 10, S. L. Adams, Pittsville; No. 11, Isaac Erickson, Arpin; No. 12, Gust Hollway, Marshfield; No. 13, Fred Fenske, Arpin; No. 14, Garrick Loomans, Arpin; No. 15, Charles Carlson, R. R. 5; No. 16, Fred Johnson, Auburndale; No. 17, Frank W. Merrill, Marshfield.

Get Good Pay
The pay for the patrolmen is $150 per month for all men who are on their second or longer terms of service on the patrols and $145 for all new patrol men who have not served before. They too will be raised to $150 per month after one month's service providing their work is satisfactory. Last year the patrol men served eight months and it is probable the road season will last as long this year. At the end of the season an additional bonus of five dollars per month is awarded the patrol men if their work has been satisfactory.

Long Stretch in County
There are 232 miles of roads in this county to be patrolled, according to Mr. Morris and Mrs. Hougren, assistant to Mr. Morris. "Some of the roads are concrete and other macadamized," Mrs. Hougren said, "and the work will be easier, yet the patrolmen will have considerable to do in keeping up the culverts and bridges and other county property along these highways."

SAW FIRST ROBBINS

Wm. Burt, in charge of the east side pumping station near the Northwestern bridge, reports the first robbers this morning, having seen two or three red breasted animals near his station this morning. Mr. Burt states that the birds appear chirp and gay despite the cold weather and are evidently ere to stay.

MAKES FIRST RETURN

The first town treasurer in Wood county making the return of the town taxes appeared at the court house this morning, making the returns for the town of Cameron. Llewellyn Howland, of that town, is given credit by County Treasurer Morris, for having the first return. The taxes for the town of Cameron were $4,388.97 which is quite an increase over the taxes in that town last year.

PASTOR SPOKE TO ROTARIANS

STEVENS POINT MINISTER EXPLAINS SPIRIT OF CLUB AT WEEKLY LUNCHEON

Rev. Hogan, pastor of St. Stephen's church, at Stevens Point, spoke to the Rotarians of this city at their weekly luncheon this noon, telling of the good which can be accomplished by carrying out their code of ethics and telling Rotarians, that he considered the Rotary Club the greatest civic body ever organized.

Call For High Standards

Rev. Hogan told the Rotarians that their code of ethics demanded that they give a portion of their time for others, that the spirit of the club in putting service before self and the fact that he profits most who serves best, awakened the personal responsibilities of the Rotarians to other people. He spoke of the brotherhood which this spirit created and stated that had the Rotary spirit been prevalent thruout the world there would never have been a world war. He states that in the Rotary code of ethics he saw the solution of many of the problems of both business and social life bringing up a higher standard for the business men to follow in their principles.

Went Thru Strike

The speakers referred to the great wood workers strike in Oshkosh in 1907 where he attended conferences of the employers and where they absolutely disregarded the workingmen, looking only for production in the plants. He told of the change that had come to Oshkosh and how last summer, when the unrest thruout the country was general, he saw the change that had come to the employers in dealing with their men. He attributed much of this change to the fact that the Oshkosh Rotary club had effected among the business men. He told of a visit of a mill superintendent there to a home of a working man who had a large family. The superintendent went back to the directors and told them that in those boys seated around that workingman's table depended the prosperity of America, and not in the production of the plant. This he symbolized as Rotary spirit.

Rev. Hogan said that Rotary was for the betterment of the community, business, for fellowship, thoughtfulness, and while its membership is limited it has a broader scope than other clubs in the fact that it takes one representative from every business who goes back to his fellow business men as a missionary.

Upheld Irish

The fight for freedom which Ireland is putting up was a topic which brought out some comment from the Stevens Point pastor, who stated that it was the only white nation under the sun today that is denied freedom. He stated that they had been fighting for seven centuries for freedom and would fight seven more if necessary to get it.

Senator Bird of Wausau spoke briefly on Rotary and its principles, dwelling on the economic unrest and telling the Rotarians that the solution would come when both the employers and employe stopped and took the other man's side of the case into consideration.

FARMERS ASK FOR FACTS ON POINTS

THE CANDIDATES DOWN TO BLAC KAND WHITE STATEMENTS

(By Associated Press)

Washington, March 17—A questionnaire to be submitted to all candidates for the presidency are completed today by the National Board of Farmers organization here. It includes twelve questions bearing on national problems and President Barrett said each requires an affirmative or negative answer.

The answers received will be made public, Barrett said, and when the canvass is completed an announcement may be made as to which candidate comes nearest meeting the requirements of organized farmers.

Phillip Greenbaum of Milwaukee is a business visitor here today.

Rudolph Kujawa of Rudolph, was called to Stevens Point Tuesday on account of the serious illness of his father.

Wm. Osborne of Wausau is in the city today.

RIPON GLEE CLUB HERE FRIDAY NIGHT

COLLEGE SONGSTERS TO PERFORM AT DALY'S

Ripon College Glee Club will invade Grand Rapids Friday to stage a concert at Daly's Opera House Friday evening. The Ripon club is said to be one of the best in the history of the college and this year's tour is the twenty-seventh annual tour of the club.

There are many Ripon alumni in the city and vicinity who will welcome the songsters from their Alma Mater to Grand Rapids. There ought to be a good turnout to welcome the college men from indications.

UNION ELECTS POLITICAL BODY

NON-PARTISAN COMMITTEE FOR NATIONAL ELECTION NAMED BY CENTRAL BODY

The Central Labor Body of Grand Rapids opened their campaign in regard to national politics when at the meeting of the organization they named a committee which will work with the American Federation of Labor in the national election next fall. The committee appointed includes:

F. C. Brown, chairman,
Emil Knuth,
M. J. Whitrock,
Joe Casper,
Wm. C. Schroeder.

Is Non-Partisan

The committee will be known as the National Non-Partisan Campaign Committee and will handle the political matters from the Grand Rapids unions in regard to the presidential election. They will work with the National Committee which represents all the unions in the United States.

Out of Local Field

According to local representatives of the unions the committee has nothing to do with the local political parties either in the city or in Wood county, or even in the state elections. They are non-partisan and the local union officials state that they are appointed to investigate the candidates put up and see if they are fair or unfair to labor. It is the intention of the unions thruout the country to support some man who has shown his attitude one of treating the labor problems with a just and unbiased judgment, the officials state, and the local committee will keep Grand Rapids men informed in regard to the candidates whom they consider fair.

STEVENS POINT MAN DISTRICT CHAIRMAN

CONSOLIDATED ENGINEER ON PUBLIC WORKS BODY

Acting in conjunction with the nationwide plan to establish a department of public works at Washington, Wisconsin has been divided into district and chairman are being appointed in each district to assemble manufacturers, business men, engineers, chemists, geologists and others who would benefit thru such a department.

W. F. Snyder of Stevens Point, engineer in charge of the power plant at the Stevens Point division of the Consolidated, has been appointed chairman of the Eighth Congressional district by F. A. Vaughan, Milwaukee, state chairman of the organization.

Mr. Snyder will organize this district and conduct an advertising campaign in the interests of the movement. Congressman E. E. Browne of Waupaca will be asked to support the proposed legislation when it comes up in the house for a vote.

The National Public Works Department association, which is urging the establishment of a department of public works, is a league composed of national, state and local societies having an aggregate membership of over 100,000 engineers, architects, constructors, manufacturers, chemists, geologists, economists and business men.

Its purpose is to organize under one department the many and varied public work function of the federal government. These functions are now scattered thru nine separate departments and 39 bureaus and services. It is claimed that this independent operation and competitive relation of like functions renders the government wasteful and inefficient in its business conduct.

PORT EDWARDS TRIMS CHAMPS

PAPER MAKERS ROLL HIGH GAMES AND DEFEAT LEADERS.

After going thru the entire season without a defeat the Normington team fell before the onslaught of the Port Edwards bowling team last night on the Elks Alleys. The down river bowlers came out of the fray with a total of seventy-two pins to the good, winning two of the three games played. While the Port Edwards boys did not break any of the alley records in bringing about the victory they rolled some good averages and had a total pin score of 2538 to their credit at the end of the game. Capt. Normington stated to day that they had simply been outrolled and were offering no alibi for the defeat after a long string of victories.

Have Good Record.

The Normington team has set up a record probably never equalled in the league on local alleys, having won fifteen straight games and going thru this entire season without a defeat. The game last night was the sixteenth game for them this season, leaving them but two more games to play to complete their schedule.

Won Two Games.

The Port Edwards team started off strong taking the first game with twelve pins to spare. Neither team broke into the two hundred class but Luebke got off with a strong start, rolling 193. Normington's came back in the second game and won with a margin of 58 pins. Luebke hit them a little harder that time and set up a 204 score, Jackson also of Port Edwards getting 193. Normington's were completely outclassed in the 3rd game, losing by 130 pins. Luebke's average for the evening was 203 pins per game.

MEXICAN KILLS WISCONSIN BOY

NEW LONDON YOUNG MAN
SHOT BY GREASER WHOM HE DISCHARGED

Raymond A. Corcoran, son of Mrs. G. A. Sullivan of New London, and superintendent of the Santa Gertrudis gold and silver mines in Pachuca, Mexico, was killed by his private secretary, J. Ibarra, Saturday, Feb. 28.

According to reports from Mexico, Ibarra had asked Mr. Corcoran for leave of absence but was told that owing to a press of work he could not be spared at the time. Ibarra, however, went to Mexico City in spite of the refusal and when he returned he was informed by Mr. Corcoran that he could look for work elsewhere as the company would never employ him again.

Ibarra then told his story to some of his companions who appear to have given him bad advice, for he returned to his former chief's office where Mr. Corcoran was seated dictating some letters and without a word of warning drew his pistol and shot him twice in the back. Mr. Corcoran fell to the floor and expired a few moments later. Ibarra was immediately arrested and placed in jail in Pachuca where he is awaiting trial.

Mr. Corcoran was born in Madison June 11, 1885. At the age of four years he came to New London with his mother and attended the Most Precious Blood school until he was thirteen years old. Even at that youthful age his desire for advancement was strong, so his wish to attend college was gratified and he was sent to St. Thomas College at St. Paul, Minn., where he remained for two years. The next two years were spent at St. Ignace Jesuit college at Chicago. From there he accompanied the Fathers to St. Mary's college in Kansas which he attended for three years, and it was thru the influence of several Mexican students there that he attained the desire to go to Mexico and he left for that country when he was about twenty-one years old, and had since been connected with the Santa Gertrudis Mining Company. After several years of assistant superintendency, during which time only his age kept him from the higher position, as men much older very respectfully obeyed a superior officer of his age, in January of this year he was promoted to superintendent, a position which he was not destined to hold for long.

His marriage to Miss Hazel Patrick was solemnized Jan. 14, 1918, at Laredo, Texas, at the home of the latter's parents.

Besides his wife and mother he is survived by an infant son a year old. At the time of his death his wife and baby were visiting at the home of her parents.

BOY SCOUTS HELP TAME WILD TRIBE

Kavali, Madras Presidency, India, Jan. 10.—Under the direction of the British Indian Government American Baptist missionaries are adopting incidental methods in educating and otherwise making good citizens of one of the so called criminal tribes of India. This tribe, known as the Erukakas, is made up of what in another country could be called gypsies or brigands and has been rounded up by the government into this region.

The "wild" men and women of the tribe are being taught to work, and the boys and girls of the tribe are put in school with other children of this place. The "criminals," as they are called, number two-thirds of the enrollment in the school. Exhibitions from time to time of the work of the pupils brought out a procession of the Erukakas, and the sight of one of their children reciting in a class was a source of intense pleasure.

So responsive have the Erukaka boys proven that a pageant was given recently dealing with the Great War. Several government officials who were present at the pageant were surprised at the discipline.

Discipline has been aided by the introduction of the Boy Scout movement. The Head Master of the Kavali School first took the training in Madras, and then he put some twenty of the boys through the training. The administering of the Scout's oath and the presentation of staves and scout handkerchiefs was an unique event and was attended by several officials. This is the only troop in the Madras Presidency that has boys from the criminal tribe in it.

BUILD LONGEST GOLF COURSE AT DENVER

MOVE WHOLE TOWN TO LAY OUT MARVEL COURSE

Denver, Col.—The municipal golf links of Denver, the longest course in the United States, if not in the world, according to experts here, has been constructed in this city. In order to lay out the course it was necessary to remove 45 buildings, a farm dairy, a brick yard, a dumping ground and part of a race track.

The course which is 18 holes, covers 6,767 yards. It adjoins City Park and occupies eighty acres of ground, forty of which belong to the state and forty to the city.

One feature of the municipal course, and one which differs from most courses, is that the "bounds" are kept to the left hand side. This construction makes it a delight to "right handers," as a "slice" from the tee keeps the ball in the course, instead of carrying it out of bounds. Another feature is its great number of bunkers and traps. There are 98 bunkers, traps and hazards.

The course is typically western in its formation—there being little grass on the fairways. The greens are of oiled sand, with a turf "apron" or approach.

TO BUILD MILL

Marinette, Wis.—H. F. Below, who some time ago purchased and is now operating the old N. Ludington mill, has decided to build a planing mill and dry kiln. Machinery for the planing mill has already been ordered and work on the two new structures will start as soon as the snow is off the ground. The H. F. Below Lumber Co., is also installing new sidetracks in the Ludington yards and will make Marinette its concentration point.

RAISING SALARIES OF NO. DAKOTA TEACHERS

COUNTY AGENTS INCLUDED IN GENERAL PAY BOOST

Fargo, N. D.—Every professor, instructor and teacher in the North Dakota Agricultural College; all boys and girls club leaders, and all county agents in the state will hereafter receive higher salaries, more nearly commensurate with the importance of their work, and the present day cost of living.

Effective Jan. 1

The state board of administration, after conferring with Dr. E. F. Ladd, president of the Agricultural College, the deans, and representatives of the Teachers Union, has announced a new schedule, effective and retroactive to January 1. A definite, twelve month schedule was adopted.

Where the employment is for twelve months, the entire year, there will be twelve monthly payments totalling the full year's salary. Where the employment is for nine months, the total salary will be one-twelfth less than for the entire year and payments will be made in nine monthly installments.

Set Scale

Here are the new rates of pay: Deans and heads of schools, $3,000 to $4,000; professors and heads of departments, $2,500 to $3,500; associate professors, $2,000 to $3,000; assistant professors, $2,000 to $2,500; regular instructors of two years' course, $1,500 to $2,000.

Employees of the experiment stations will receive the same pay as teachers in the college when they do the same work. Project leaders in the extension division will be ranked as professors. Club leaders rank as associate professors, and county agents with assistant professors and instructors, according to scope and service.

GOOD ROADS ARE ESSENTIAL

Success of Motor Truck Express Lines
Depends Greatly on Character of Highways.

The success of the motor truck express depends to a very large degree on the character of the roads over which the routes run. Bad roads increase the operating costs, and consequently the rates to patrons, beyond the point of economy. Trucks are destructive to roads unless the roads are permanently built. Therefore, the problem of improving and developing the marketing facilities for farmers through the establishment of rural motor express lines is directly connected with the problem of permanent improvement of the highways.

STATE DAIRYMEN IN CLEAN-UP CAMPAIGN

Paralleling the better bull campaign which is being carried on in Wisconsin is the work being done to eradicate tuberculosis among the cattle of the state, under the accredited herd plan.

"The accredited herd plan is a part of the campaign to rid the live stock of the United States of tuberculosis," says E. G. Hastings, member of the Wisconsin live stock sanitary board and bacteriologist at the college of agriculture. "The value of the work lies in the aid it renders toward removing the danger from tuberculosis in our herds and among the milk-consuming people of the state. When a man purchases animals from a herd whose owner has a certificate from the state and federal governments that the herd is free from tuberculosis, he is willing to pay a bigger price for the animals which he knows to be sound. Therein lies one of the cash values of the plan to the farmer."

Dr. J. S. Healey.

Many Added to Lists.

During the month of October 77 Wisconsin herds were accredited or passed the first negative test for tuberculosis. The total number of animals in these herds was 2,059. Among the herds were 39 Holstein, 23 Guernsey, 6 Jersey, 3 each for Shorthorn and Brown Swiss, and one each for Friesian, Durham, Aberdeen-Angus and Ayrshire. Winnebago county is the home of 27 of the herds, and Vernon county is second for the month with 7 herds. Outagamie county had 6, Walworth 5, Chippewa, Waukesha and Rock had 4 each, Monroe 3, Waupaca, La Crosse, Eau Claire and Burnett counties had two each, and St. Croix, Grant, Shawano, Racine, Green, Washington, Jefferson, Sawyer and Dane had one each.

"If the work is continued it will tend to bring all purebred herds of cattle under state and government supervision and the eradication of tuberculosis," says Mr. Hastings.

Appearance Sometimes Tells.

Tuberculosis has been found to be very hard to detect by a physical examination. Herds that appear healthy may have the disease. The only good way to determine whether or not the disease is present in a herd is to have the proper authorities use the tuberculin test on the animals.

"Owners of cattle must co-operate fully in this work in order to make it a success," says Dr. J. S. Healey, representative of the United States department of agriculture, who is co-operating with the state board in tuberculosis eradication. "Any breeder interested in getting his herd officially accredited, and in having his herd freed of tuberculosis, may make application for the agreement for the testing and handling of the herd, to the state live stock sanitary division. An accredited herd means that the owner has fulfilled certain requirements, and has been officially certified for it."

State Has Good Record.

On April 1, 1919, Wisconsin had 17 accredited herds of no less than five purebreds or ten grade cattle in a herd, and 118 of the herds that had been tested once without reactors. Out of 18,120 head of cattle tested between January 1 and September 1, 1919, in various parts of Wisconsin, 3.75 per cent reacted to the tuberculin test, which is an unusually small number. The significance in these figures is that Wisconsin is a good source of accredited tuberculosis-free herds, which is a record bound to attract business from other states and is certain to attract local buyers to the owners of accredited herds.

Barron County's Claims.

Barron county claims to lead all the other counties of the state in having the largest percentage of tillable land; the largest percentage of cleared land in the northern counties; largest number of potato growers' associations; largest local potato growers' association in America; largest number of live stock shipping associations, and largest co-operative creamery in the world. Barron county also expects to have the lowest percentage of tubercular cattle and the highest percentage of purebred sires.

The use of shelter, paint and oil on farm machinery is insurance for the farm equipment.

WILL RESTOCK LITTLE PLOVER

STEVENS POINT SPORTSMEN WILL PLANT TROUT FRY IN ONCE POPULAR STREAM

The Portage County Fish & Game Protective association will restore the Little Plover river as a favorite trout stream for sportsmen by re-stocking it with trout fry and removing pickerel and suckers from Springville pond into which it empties four miles south of this city.

The plan has received the endorsement of the state conservation commission and officials of the local association will take initial steps as early as next week. The stream should again be abundant with trout within two or three years' time, as the results of the efforts of the association.

To Check "Running"

Wire meshes will be placed in the channel of the Little Plover at its mouth at the upper end of Springville pond. These meshes will probably be placed next week, their purpose being to prevent pickerel and suckers which have wintered in the pond, from "running" up stream this spring. The fish will turn back when they reach this artificial barrier.

Use Nets in Pond

Later on in the spring the pond will be lowered at the Rossier mill on the Plover road, in order to place nets in the pond and remove the pickerel and suckers. The pickerel will be taken out and placed in the stream below the mill, from where they can find their way down stream to the Wisconsin river, while the suckers caught in the nets will be given away to any persons desiring to eat them. This work will be carried out under the supervision of an official of the commission.

While it will be impossible to clear the pond entirely of all fish except trout, the netting should accomplish big results and the association believes the plan will meet with direct results.

Will Restock Streams

Government fingerlings will be secured if possible, after the suckers and pickerel have been removed, and will be planted in the Little Plover. The stream is an ideal one for trout and under advantageous circumstances the fish should develop and increase rapidly.

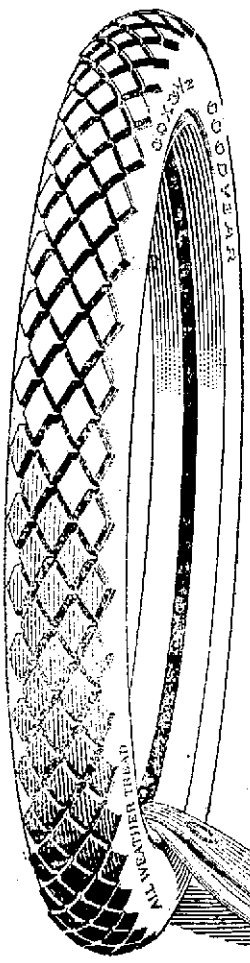

Years ago the Little Plover was a mecca for sportsmen and it was not uncommon for trout fishermen to make big catches on the stream. It is only a little more than three miles in length but for nearly its entire length is naturally protected by brush and woods. The water is clear and almost transparent and remains cold even during the hot summer days, rising in springs at the source of the stream and flowing rapidly down to Springville pond. In recent years it has been difficult to make good catches of trout on the Little Plover and because of the conditions which make it almost an ideal trout stream, the fish and game association is determined to restore it as a favorite fishing ground.

TO TOUR STATE

Appleton, Wis.—Lawrence college Men's Glee Club will start March 24 on what will be the biggest spring tour in the history of the club. The itinerary includes such cities as Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Madison.

Several features new to glee club concerts are included in the program prepared by Carl J. Waterman, director. A quartette will give several numbers, and a vaudeville sketch is to be presented by Fenwick Pugh, Racine and Roy Herbst, Escanaba, Mich.

The World's Largest Production of Tires on the Smaller Cars Alone

We call attention not so much to the size of this average daily production as to the extent of the effort we put into the making of these 30x3-, 30x3½-, and 31x4-inch sizes.

The separate factory we have devoted to their manufacture is not only the largest of its kind in the world, but it makes fully effective that experience and resourcefulness which have produced the tires most popular on the higher-priced cars.

No tires bearing the Goodyear name contain a higher relative value than these tires for Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell and other cars requiring the sizes mentioned.

If you own one of these cars, go to the nearest Goodyear Service Station Dealer for these tires and for Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes. He has them.

30x3½ Goodyear Double-Cure Fabric, All-Weather Tread. $23.50

30x3½ Goodyear Single-Cure Fabric, Anti-Skid Tread. $21.50

Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes are thick, strong tubes that reinforce casings properly. Why risk a good casing with a cheap tube? Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes cost little more than tubes of less merit. 3 x 3½ size in water. $4.50 proof bag.

GOODYEAR

If you knew the facts of Tire construction, you would understand why it is possible for Goodyear to build Better Tires. You would accept them as the best. Let us show you our line of these famous lines in 30 x 3, 30 x 3½, 31 x 4 Clincher Type.

Our service assures you full worth from your tires.

THE HIGH HEARTS

Life will continue to be an adventure even after the genus prophylactic has succeeded in making the world a safe place for democracy to live in. The adventurers will be every whit as high hearted.

The Survey comments cheerfully that in this year of grace wine, women and song have become ginger ale, wives and community singing.

What in other years might have been regarded as insurmountable obstacles to happiness have been reared but the world jumps as blithely as before into empyreans.

That is the hopeful thing about "reform," it doesn't touch the spirit of man. The more sweeping the reform from the greater the swing from the moral agency and creeds behind the moral agency. Tremont temple in Boston is a very unsuccessful enterprise since the dry wave swept the country.

The reform wave is only in its inception. There will be even greater successes. But the dance goes on as merrily, or more so, in the halls, the wife becomes more of an episode, we sing, "Till We Meet Again" as loudly as once we sang "We Won't Go Home Until Morning."

The reformer flourishes like a green bay tree, covers the earth and comes to naught because he can't fether a high heart with sails set for adventure.—Rockford Republic.

GERMAN CIVIL WAR

The continued turmoil of Germany where the lid has been bumping up and down for many months, and the final explosion was not at all expected in government circles. The markets and the financial centers did not blink an eye when the news of the Ebert overthrow was ticked off the wires.

Why Germany was faced with civil war at this time, can easily be explained. The Ebert government was too much of a people's government for the dyed-in-the-wool Prussians and Hohennollern followers. A century or more of training is not forgotten in a day, nor in a year of any other kind of a regime.

Now, that Germany is split and is virtually in the throes of a civil war, would be the right time for the effective police power of a league of nations to step in and prevent useless and unwarranted bloodshed. The machinery of peace must be strong enough to maintain peace.

In all decency to humanity, war must be further prevented, unless the peace of the world wants to be sacrificed entirely and thrown into constant ruthless warfare, the results of which will mean the ultimate destruction of the white races and the wastage of all civilized peoples. Years ago students of world affairs predicted great chaos, great destruction and great disintegration of races of white people. Today we find that condition threatening the western world and unless steps for prevention of any further war and destruction are taken, that section of the world will be laid open to attack and invasion from the great hordes from the east.

HOLDING SERVICES.

The United Leuten Services being held this week in the First Moravian church are certainly attaining their object. As you look over the large throng of worshippers you see all denominations represented and all mingled together. As one of the speakers put it, "We are all Christians here; not Congregationalists, Methodists, Moravians, Lutherans, Baptists, or Episcopalians." The addresses have been earnest, the singing inspiring, and the devotional spirit of worship all that could be asked. The fact that seven different churches can successfully unite in holding such services speaks well for our city and for its churches. The power of church sentiment is a thing that will have to be reckoned with in the future.

Meetings will be held tonight and tomorrow and on Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock in the First Moravian church.

WAUPACA MAY BUY RAILWAY

REFUSAL OF LINE TO PAVE PUTS PURCHASE UP TO VOTERS

Following a threat which the manager of the Waupaca Electric Service Company is alleged to have made, in which he said the company would rather tear up their lines than have to stand the expense of paving from Waupaca to the Wisconsin Veterans Home at the Chain o' Lakes, the people are put the proposition of buying the plant or sacrificing the line.

Can't Discriminate

The Common Council does not believe it has any more right to relieve the company from its part of the expense of paving that street and a recent decision by the Wisconsin Supreme Court has made it evident that the Council had no legal right to discriminate against the taxpayers of that street in favor of the corporation that enjoys by an indeterminate franchise, free use of the city street.

Neither do members of the Council believe that the people of Waupaca wish to see the electric road taken up without careful and exhaustive study of the situation. It is for the purpose of affording opportunity for the necessary study of conditions that the council has decided to give the people the privilege of voting on the question of purchase of the property of the Electric company.

Comes Every Four Years

If a majority vote is registered against the question on April 6th, the matter of purchase will be closed for four years at least.

If the majority should vote "Yes" it will empower the Council to apply for an appraisal of the road by the Wisconsin Railroad Rate Commission. Members of the Council express the opinion that the application for this physical valuation of the road by the Commission might afford opportunity to ascertain the financial condition of the company. If the appraisal by the Commission seems to be a reasonable valuation of the property, the Council will again put it up to the voters to determine whether the people desire to purchase the property at the price made by the Commission.

Move Cautiously

Members of the Common Council express a determination to move cautiously in this matter, gauging their action largely by the will of the voters as expressed thru the ballot box. Several members believe that the Council and the public are entitled to know more of the facts regarding the condition of the company that is rendering a public service for which the taxpayers are paying, especially when this public utility corporation comes and asks for favors by way of remission of taxes which cannot be accorded to an individual even if such special tax does work a hardship upon the individual tax payer.

The Auburndale basketball team accompanied by Butch Gebert of Milladore played our Sherry boys on March 8. It was a rough game from start to finish. One of the Auburndale boys knocked one of our boys up against the wall which knocked him giddy for a time. Then a discussion later on in the game led to a fight which would have perhaps proved serious had not some of the spectators stepped in and stopped them. The game however was played out, after one of the Auburndale players was thrown out of the game and a sub took his place. The game ended with a tie 2 and 2. A large crowd was present and the boys cleared $10.75.

FOUND LOST BRIDE AT STEVENS POINT

DISAPPOINTED GROOM WON WITH WATCHFUL WAITING

Watchful waiting in a Stevens Point hotel brought the discovery of a Portage county's young man's missing bride after the young man had failed to meet the young woman at Marshfield according to their plans, had taken the wrong train and landed in Stevens Point instead of Marshfield, and after he had given up hope of ever seeing his bride again.

Frank J. Pionke, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pionke of Almond, went to Marshfield where he was to meet his bride-to-be, Miss Jessie M. Davidson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Elliott of Plainfield, who had been teaching at Thorp but relinquished her teaching duties on Friday.

Soo train No. 12 from Ashland pulled into the Marshfield station and Pionke promptly boarded the passenger. He walked down the aisles of first one coach and then another until he had taken inventory of every passenger aboard, but his bride-to-be was not found. By that time No. 12 was well on its way to the next station and so the young man continued on to Stevens Point.

According to the plans, Miss Davidson boarded Soo passenger No. 2 at Thorp Friday afternoon. When the train reached Marshfield an hour after No. 12 had left Marshfield, the bride-to-be anxiously looked over the young men who climbed aboard. The groom-to-be was nowhere around. When the train pulled out of the Marshfield station Miss Davidson went on to Stevens Point.

In the meantime Pionke had registered at the Jacobs Hotel and then took a seat in the lobby and proceeded to do some tall thinking. At the end of an hour's time when the mystery was still unsolved a number of passengers from train No. 2 entered the hotel door, among them being his fiancée. Explanations were in order and the misunderstanding promptly cleared up.

The wedding took place on Sunday afternoon. They have gone to the town of Almond to reside on the groom's farm.

The Wonders of America

THE GALVESTON SEA WALL.

GALVESTON has the finest harbor on the gulf coast and ranks high as a city of delightful homes. Although not a resort, the semitropical climate attracts thousands of tourists annually to her long, gradually sloping beach.

To prevent a recurrence of the terrible flood of 1900, the sea wall—one of the sights of the country—was constructed along the gulf side of the city. This great wall is 22,403 feet long, 17 feet high, 16 feet wide at the bottom and five feet wide on top. It is built of concrete and granite and rests on a foundation of piling. These piles are 40 feet long, not less than 12 inches in diameter at the small end, four rows wide, set four feet apart. The top of the wall is used for a walk.

To prevent water from the gulf flowing behind the wall and flooding the city during severe storms, the grade of a large portion of the city was raised from 2 to 17 feet. This necessitated the raising of about 2,500 buildings and the readjustment of streets, sidewalks, street car tracks, electric lights, water and gas pipes to the new level.

The filling-in material was taken from the bay. The dredges, after pumping their holds full, steamed up a canal behind the wall and discharged their load through pipe lines leading down the various streets. When the work was completed the canal was filled. The magnitude of this undertaking is unparalleled in America.

At the Theatres

It may interest some of the Bill Hart fans to know that friendship which has existed for many years between Thos. H. Ince, former small time vaudeville actor and now great director and Bill Hart who dragged him out of his seclusion and made him what he is has been rudely broken supposedly because of Ince's growing greed which, according to the allegations of a suit filed by Hart, caused the director to withhold certain agreed profits and to defraud Hart in various ways. In fact "Square Deal Sanderson" is the final feature in which the statement, "Thos. H. Ince presents" is used in the advertising and as a matter of fact, Hart directed the picture himself. The friendship between the two men began when Ince had landed in the managements of a theater in an Ohio river town near Cincinnati and Hart was with a road show and has thrived thru the years, only to be severed by lust for money. It seems too bad. But anyone who has met Bill Hart will place the blame on Ince for one instinctively feels that there isn't an ounce of greed in the Dakota's whole system. Now Ince has joined with a number of other directors to make their own pictures and its dollars to doughnuts the whole affair will break up in a row within a year. Hart is still with Paramount-Arctcraft and will make eight more pictures before retiring from the screen so he announces, "Square Deal Sanderson" is at The Palace tonight and tomorrow.

FISHERMEN TIED UP

Sheboygan, Wis.—Owing to the heavy ice floes which extend far out into the lake, the fishermen of Sheboygan have been operating at a great loss during the past two months. While the ice is no thicker than in former years, it gave favorable indications a number of times when fishermen made trips out on the lake but were put to a loss when unable to lift their nets. It is expected that within two weeks tugs will be operated under normal expense and the local fishing industry will be conducted with its regular efficiency.

LIBRARIES TO PROVIDE EXTENSIVE SERVICE

HOPE TO REACH MILLIONS WHO LACK MEANS OF EDUCATION

Extension of library service to the 60,000,000 persons in the United States today who have inadequate opportunities of obtaining good reading matter, self-education and promotion of better citizenship thru good books, are the principal aims of the "Books for Everybody" movement of the American Library Association now under way in every state in the Union. The Enlarged Program adopted by the Association forecasts a time when every man, woman and child in America will have free and easy access to all that is best in the world of books.

Encouragement of technical libraries in industries, of more books for the blind in the standard Braille type, and the expansion of the county library system, are other phases of the movement on which much stress is laid. Greater and more flexible service to the Merchant Marine, coast guard stations and lighthouses; translation of the best books about America into the various foreign tongues for the benefit of the 15,000,000 new Americans, financing of libraries and service to ex-soldiers, sailors and marines in hospitals of the United States Public Health Service—these are projects put under way by the Association in its broad program.

Opportunities for self-instruction in all lines of human endeavor and a broader general knowledge thru reading and study courses to be prepared under the direction of skilled librarians are available under the "Books for Everybody" movement. It is a program of better citizenship thru universal adult education. To carry out the work of the Association for the next three years, a fund of $2,000,000 will be obtained, not thru an intensive drive, but by individual efforts of librarians, library trustees, and friends of libraries.

TWO SOLDIERS BURNED IN RUSSIAN BARRACKS

MEMBERS OF A. E. F. DIE IN CAMP FIRE

Washington, Mar. 15—Two members of the A. E. F. at Vladivostok were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the American barracks at that place March 6, and two others are missing, the War Department was advised in a cablegram received today by General Gray.

The bodies of two of the men were found in the ruins but were so badly burned that identification was not possible.

WOMEN WILL DECIDE WHAT'S PROPER WORK

NATIONAL SAFETY COUNCIL WILL CONSIDER PROBLEMS

Chicago, Ill.—How great a weight should a woman be permitted to lift? What occupations are dangerous for women? How much time is needed for lunch period?

These are a few of the many problems confronting the employers of 12,000,000 women in the United States which are to receive the attention of the Women in Industry Section of the National Safety Council during the ensuing year, in accordance with a decision of the Executive Committee, it is announced at the headquarters of the Council here.

Wisconsin Woman On
The program of activities for this section presented by its chairman, Miss Tracy Copp, formerly of the Wisconsin Industrial Commission was introduced by the following statement of the problem:

"From the employer's standpoint, the problem is to so order the work performed by women and to so regulate the conditions under which they shall work that a maximum of production may be obtained without impairment of the health and efficiency of the woman workers."

Consider Dangers
The subjects receiving special attention are:

What occupations are dangerous for women? Keeping absenteeism down to a minimum. Practical methods to reduce fatigue. Requirements or specifications if a proper factory chair for women. Summary of evidence and authoritative opinion on the limits of weight which women should be permitted to lift. How much time is needed for the lunch period. Practices of member companies employing large number of women, with respect to safety, sanitation, supervision. Modifications of processes or equipment which have resulted in greater comfort for employees and greater production. How to overcome objections to physical examination—when and how should physical examinations be conducted? Factory uniforms and clothing for women workers. Amerization of women workers. The safety and health aspects of night work for women. First-aid rooms for woman workers.

COMMUNITY HOUSE

Rhineland, Wis.—A new memorial community house is practically assured for Rhineland, a mass meeting held here on the movement strongly indicating that the building would be erected within a short time. Sixty representative men and women of the city attended the meeting at which a committee was appointed to investigate suitable building sites, get plans and attend to other arrangements. The move to erect such a building was instigated by the desire of Oneida county citizens to erect a suitable memorial for the men from here who died in France.

The Velvet tin is twice as big as shown here

There's a World of Solid Comfort In the Rich, Red Tin

YES, sir, we mean that same warm red and gold tin that smiles a welcoming "Howdy" to you in every tobacco store. Know what those colors mean?

The red is for the friendly warmth, the mellow cheeriness, that Velvet puts into your old pipe. And the gold is where the Kentucky sunshine, that ripens good old Velvet, has just sort of soaked through.

Remember what Velvet Joe said about it?

"You've met canned meat and canned music. Ever see any tinned sunshine? Well, look into any Velvet tin."

And think this over:

We don't have to hide Velvet's taste or smell with a lot of this, that and the other thing. Because Velvet has naturally what pipe smokers want—real simon-pure tobacco taste and fragrance. It's just good, honest Kentucky leaf, made still more friendly and mellow by two years' ageing in wooden hogsheads. Just good tobacco. That's all. But it's mighty near enough for the man who wants a pipeful of tobacco and not a box of bon bons.

The picture of a pipe on the tin needn't keep you from rolling a jim-dandy cigarette with Velvet.

How's the Velvet holding out in your old red tin?

The VALLEY of the GIANTS

By PETER B. KYNE
Author of "Cappy Ricks"

This story in motion pictures with Wallace Reid will be shown at the Palace March 23-24.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Pioneer in the California redwood region, John Cardigan, at forty-seven, is the leading citizen of Sequoia, owner of mills, ships, and a many acres of timber, a widower after three years of married life, and father of two-day-old Bryce Cardigan.

CHAPTER II.—At fourteen Bryce makes the acquaintance of Shirley Sumner, a girl from Sequoia, and his junior by a few years. Together they visit the Valley of the Giants, sacred to John Cardigan and his son as the burial place of Bryce's mother, and part with mutual regret.

CHAPTER III.—While Bryce is at college John Cardigan meets with heavy business losses and for the first time views the future with uncertainty.

CHAPTER IV.—After graduation from college, and a trip abroad, Bryce Cardigan comes home. On the train he meets Shirley Sumner, on her way to Sequoia to make her home there with her uncle, Col. Pennington. Bryce learns that his father's eyes have failed and that Col. Pennington is seeking to take advantage of the old man's business misfortunes.

CHAPTER V.—In the Valley of the Giants young Cardigan finds a tree felled directly across his mother's grave. Indications are that it was cut down to secure the burl, and evidence seems to show that Pennington and his woods-boss, Jules Rondeau, are implicated in the outrage.

CHAPTER VI.—Dining with Col. Pennington and his niece, Bryce finds the room paneled with redwood burl, confirming his suspicions of the guilt. In a diplomatic way, unperceived by Shirley, the two men declare war.

CHAPTER VII.—Pennington refuses to renew his logging contract with the Cardigans, believing his action means bankruptcy for the latter. Bryce forces Rondeau to confess he felled the tree in the Valley of the Giants at Pennington's order. After punishing the man, Bryce buries him at Col. Pennington, who, with Shirley, had witnessed the fight. Pennington is humiliated, and the girl, indignant, orders Bryce to leave her and forget their friendship. He leaves, but refuses to accept dismissal.

"Shirley," he said. "You are presumptuous," she quavered.

"You set me an example in presumption," he retorted good humoredly. "Did you not call me by my first name a minute ago?" The heir to Cardigan's redwoods bent over the girl. "You spoke to me—after your promise not to, Shirley," he said gently. "You will always speak to me."

She commenced to cry softly. "I love you," she sobbed.

"For you I have the utmost respect and admiration," he replied.

"No, you haven't. If you had, you wouldn't hurt my uncle—the only man being in all this world who is dear to me."

"Gosh!" he murmured plaintively. "I'm jealous of that man. However, I'm sorry I hurt him. I give you my word I came here to fight fairly."

"He merely tried to stop you from fighting."

"No, he didn't, Shirley. He interfered and fouled me. Still, despite that, if I had known you were a spectator I think I should have controlled myself and refrained from pulling off my vengeance in your presence. I shall never cease to regret that I subjected you to such a distressing spectacle. I do hope, however, that you will believe me when I tell you I am not a bully, although when there is a fight worth while, I never dodge it. And this time I fought for the honor of the House of Cardigan."

"If you want me to believe that, you will beg my uncle's pardon."

"I can't do that. He is my enemy and I shall hate him forever; I shall fight him and his way of doing business until he reforms or I am exhausted."

"You realize, of course, what your insistence on that plan means, Mr. Cardigan?"

"Call me Bryce," he pleaded. "You're going to call me that some day anyhow, so why not start now?"

"You are altogether insufferable, sir. Please go away and never presume to address me again. You are quite impossible."

He shook his head. "I do not give up that readily, Shirley. I didn't know how dear—what your friendship meant to me, until you sent me away; I didn't think there was any hope until you warned me those dogs were hunting me—and called me Bryce." He held out his hand. "God gave us our relations," he quoted, "but, thank God, we can choose our friends." And I'll be a good friend to you, Shirley Sumner, until I have earned the right to be something more. Won't you shake hands with me? Remember, this fight today is only the first skirmish in a war to the finish—and I am leading a forlorn hope. If I lose—well, this will be good-bye."

"I hate you," she answered dreatily. "All our fine friendship—smashed—and you growing stupidly sentimental. I didn't think of you. Please go away. You are distressing me."

He smiled at her tenderly, forgiv-ingly, wistfully, but she did not see it.

"Then it is really good-bye," he murmured with mock dolorousness.

She nodded her bowed head. "Yes," she whispered. "After all, I have some pride, you know. You mustn't presume to be the butterfly preaching contentment to the road in the dust."

"As you will it, Shirley." He turned away. "I'll send your axe back with the first trainload of logs from my camp, Colonel," he called to Pennington.

Once more he strode away into the timber. Shirley watched him pass out of her life, and gloried in what she conceived to be his agony, for she had both temper and spirit, and Bryce Cardigan calmly, blunderingly, rather stupidly (she thought) had presumed flagrantly on brief acquaintance.

The Colonel's voice broke in upon her bitter reflections. "That fellow Cardigan is a hard nut to crack—I'll say that for him." He had crossed the clearing to her side and was addressing her with his customary air of expansiveness. "I think, my dear, you had better go back into the caboose, away from the prying eyes of these rough fellows. I'm sorry you came, Shirley. I'll never forgive myself for bringing you. If I had thought—but how could I know that scoundrel was coming here to raise a disturbance? And only last night he was at our house for dinner!"

"I wonder what could have occurred to make such a madman out of him?" the girl queried wonderingly. "He acted more like a demon than a human being."

"Just like his old father," the Colonel purred benevolently. "When he can't get what he wants, he sulks. I'll tell you what got on his confounded nerves. I've been freighting logs for the senior Cardigan over my railroad; the contract for hauling them was a heritage from Bill Henderson, from whom I bought the mill and timberlands; and of course as his assignee it was incumbent upon me to fulfill Henderson's contract with Cardigan, even though the freight-rate was ruinous."

"Well, this morning young Cardigan came to my office, reminded me that the contract would expire by limitation next year and asked me to renew it, and at the same freight-rate. I offered to renew the contract but at a higher freight-rate, and explained to him that I could not possibly continue to haul his logs at a loss. Well, right away he flew in a rage and called me a robber; whereupon I informed him that since he thought me a robber, perhaps we had better not attempt to have any business dealings with each other—that I really didn't want his contract at any price, having scarcely sufficient rolling stock to handle my own logs. That made him calm down, but in a little while he lost his head again and grew snarly and abusive—to such an extent, indeed, that finally I was forced to ask him to leave my office."

"Nevertheless, Uncle Seth, I cannot understand why he should make such a furious attack upon your employee."

The Colonel laughed with a fair imitation of sincerity and tolerant amusement. "My dear, that is no mystery to me. Cardigan picked on Rondeau for the reason that a few days ago he tried to hire Rondeau away from me—offered him twenty-five dollars a month more than I was paying him, by George! Of course when Rondeau came to me with Cardigan's proposition, I promptly not Cardigan's bid and retained Rondeau; consequently Cardigan hates us both and took the earliest opportunity to vent his spite on us."

The Colonel sighed and brushed the dirt and leaves from his tweeds. "Thunder!" he continued philosophically, "it's all in the game, so why worry over it? And why continue to discuss an unpleasant topic, my dear?"

Her uncle took her gently by the arm and steered her toward the caboose. "Well, what do you think of your company now?" he demanded gayly.

"I think," she answered soberly, "that you have gained an enemy worth while and that it behooves you not to underestimate him."

CHAPTER VIII

Through the green timber Bryce Cardigan strode, and there was a lift in his heart now. Already he had forgotten the desperate situation from which he had just escaped; he thought only of Shirley Sumner's face, stained with terror; and because he knew that at least some of those fears had been inspired by the gravest apprehensions as to his physical well-being, because in his ears there still resounded her frantic warning, he realized that however stern her decree of banishment had been, she was nevertheless not indifferent to him.

The climax had been reached—and passed; and the result had been far from the disaster he had painted in his mind's eye ever since the knowledge had come to him that he was doomed to battle to a knockout with Colonel Pennington, and that one of the earliest fruits of hostilities would doubtless be the loss of Shirley Sumner's prized friendship. Well, he had lost her friendship, but a still smaller voice whispered to him that the loss was not irreparable—whereas he swung his axe as a bandmaster swings his baton; he was glad that he had started the war and was now free to fight it out unhampered.

Up hill and down dale he went. Within two hours his long, tireless stride brought him out into a clearing in the valley where his own logging camp stood. He went directly to the log-landing, where in a listless and half-hearted manner the loading crew were piling logs on Pennington's logging trucks.

Bryce looked at his watch. It was two o'clock; at two-fifteen Pennington's locomotive would appear, to back in and couple to the long line of trucks. And the train was only half loaded.

"Where's McTavish?" Bryce demanded of the donkey-driver.

The man mouthed his quid, spat copiously, wiped his mouth with the back of his hand, and pointed. "Up at his shanty," he made answer, and grinned at Bryce knowingly.

Up through the camp's single short street, flanked on each side with the woodsmen's shanties, Bryce went. At the most pretentious shanty on the street Bryce turned in. He had never seen it before, but he knew it to be the woods-boss's home, for unlike its neighbors the house was painted with the coarse red paint that is used on box-cars, while a fence, made of fancy pointed pickets painted white, inclosed a tiny garden in front of the house. As Bryce came through the gate, a young girl rose from where she knelt in a bed of freshly transplanted pansies.

Bryce lifted his hat. "Is Mr. McTavish at home?" he asked. She nodded. "He cannot see anybody," she hastened to add. "He's sick."

"I think he'll see me. And I wonder if you're Mr. McTavish."

"Yes, I'm Mr. Bryce."

"I'm Bryce Cardigan."

A look of fright crept into the girl's eyes. "Are you—Bryce Cardigan?" she faltered, and looked at him more closely. "Yes, you're Mr. Bryce. You've changed—but then it's six years since we saw you last, Mr. Bryce."

He came toward her with outstretched hand. "And you were a little girl when I saw you last. Now—you're a woman." She grasped his hand with the frank heartiness of a man.

"I'm twenty years old," she informed him.

"Stand right where you are until I have looked at you," he commanded, and backed off a few feet, the better to contemplate her.

He saw a girl slightly above medium height, tanned, robust, simply gowned in a gingham dress. Her hands were soiled from her recent labors in the pansy-bed, and her shoes were heavy and coarse; yet neither hands nor feet were large or ungraceful. Her head was well formed; her hair, jet black and of unusual lustre and abundance, was parted in the middle and held in an old-fashioned coil at the nape of a neck the beauty of which was revealed by the low cut of her simple frock. Her nose was patrician, her face oval; her lips, full and red, were slightly parted in the adorable Cupid's bow which is the inevitable heritage of a short upper lip; her teeth were white as Parian marble; and her full breast was rising and falling swiftly, as if she labored under a repressed excitement.

So delightful a picture did Moira McTavish make that Bryce forgot all his troubles in her sweet presence. "By the gods, Moira," he declared earnestly, "you're a peach! When I saw you last, you were awkward and leggy, like a colt. I'm sure you weren't a bit good-looking. And now you're the most ravishing young lady in seventeen counties. By jingo, Moira, you're a stunner and no mistake. Are you married?"

She shook her head, blushing pleasantly at his unpolished but sincere compliments.

"What? Not married. Why, what the deuce can be the matter with the eligible young fellows hereabouts?"

"There aren't any eligible young fellows hereabouts, Mr. Bryce. And I've lived in these woods all my life."

"Are you lonely, Moira?"

She nodded.

"Poor Moira!" he murmured absently.

The thought that he so readily understood touched her; a glint of tears was in her sad eyes. He saw them and placed his arms fraternally around her shoulders. "Tut-tut, Moira! Don't cry. I soothed her. 'I understand, Moira, and of course we'll have to do something about it. You're too far for this.' With a sweep of his hand he indicated the camp. 'Sit down on the steps, Moira, and we'll talk it over. I really called to see your father, but I guess I don't want to see him after all—if he's sick."

She looked at him bravely. "I didn't know you at first, Mr. Bryce. I fibbed. Father isn't sick. He's drunk."

"Father isn't Sick. He's Drunk."

"I thought so when I saw the loading-crew taking it easy at the log-landing. I'm terribly sorry."

"I loathe it—and I cannot leave it," she burst out vehemently. "I'm chained to my degradation. I dream dreams, and they'll never come true. I—I—oh, Mr. Bryce, Mr. Bryce, I'm so unhappy."

"So am I," he retorted. "We all get our dose of it, you know, and just at present I'm paying an extra helping. It seems. You're cursed with too much imagination, Moira. I'm sorry about your father. For all his sixty years, Moira, your confounded parent can still manhandle any man on the pay-roll, and as fast as Dad put in a new woods-boss old Mac drove him off the job. He simply declines to be fired, and Dad's worn out and too tired to bother about his old woods-boss any more. He's been waiting until I should get back."

"I know," said Moira wearily. "Nobody wants to be Cardigan's woods-boss and have to fight my father to hold his job. I realize what a nuisance he has become."

Bryce chuckled. "Of course the matter simmers down to this: Dad is so fond of your father that he just hasn't got the moral courage to work him over—and now that job is up to me. Moira, I'm not going to beat about the bush with you. They tell me your father is a hopeless inebriate."

"I'm afraid he is, Mr. Bryce."

"How long has he been drinking to excess?"

"About ten years, I think. Of course, he would always take a few drinks with the men around pay-day, but after mother died, he began taking his drinks between pay-days. Then he took to going down to Sequoia on Saturday nights and coming back on the mad-train, the maddest of the lot. I suppose he was lonely, too. He didn't get real bad, however, till about two years ago."

"Well, we have to get logs to the mill, and we can't get them with old John Barclaycorn for a woods-boss, Moira. So we're going to change woods-bosses, and the new woods-boss will not be driven off the job, because I'm going to stay up here a couple of weeks and break him in myself. But how do you manage to get money to clothe yourself? Sinclair tells me Mac needs every cent of his two hundred and fifty dollars a month to enjoy himself."

"I used to steal from him," the girl admitted. "Then I grew ashamed of that, and for the past six months I've been earning my own living. Mr. Sinclair was very kind. He gave me a job waiting on table in the camp dining room. You see, I had to have something here. I couldn't leave my father. He had to have somebody to take care of him. Don't you see, Mr. Bryce?"

"Sinclair is a fuzzy old fool," Bryce declared with emphasis. "The idea of our woods-boss's daughter slinging hash to lumberjacks. Poor Moira!"

He took one of her hands in his, noting the callous spots on the plump palm, the thick finger-joints that hinted so of toil, the nails that had never been manicured save by Moira herself. "Do you remember when I was a boy, Moira, how I used to come up to the logging-camps to hunt and fish? I always lived with the McTavishes then. And in September, when the huckleberries were ripe, we used to go out and pick them together. Poor Moira! Why, we're old pals, and I'll be shot if I'm going to see you suffer. Listen, Moira. I'm going to fire your father, as I've said, because he's working for I. B. now, not the Cardigan Redwood Lumber company. I really ought to pension him after his long years in the Cardigan service, but I'll be hanged if we can afford pensions any more—particularly to keep a man in booze; so the best our old woods-boss gets from me is this shanty, or another like it when we move to new cuttings, and a perpetual meal-ticket for our camp dining room while the Cardigans remain in business. I'd finance him for a trip to some state institution where they sometimes reclaim such wreckage, if I didn't think he's too old a dog to be taught new tricks."

"Perhaps," she suggested sadly, "you had better talk the matter over with him."

"Yes, I'd rather not. I'm fond of your father, Moira. He was a man when I saw him last—such a man as these woods will never see again—and I don't want to see him again until he's cold sober. I'll write him a letter. As for you, Moira, you're fired, too. I'll not have you waiting on table in my logging-camp—not by a jugful! You're to come down to Sequoia and go to work in our office. We can use you on the books, helping Sinclair, and relieve him of the task of billing, checking tallies, and looking after the pay roll. I'll pay you a hundred dollars a month, Moira. Can you get along on that?"

Her hand closed over his tightly, but she did not speak.

"All right, Moira. It's a go, then. There, there, girl, don't cry. We Cardigans had twenty-five years of faithful service from Donald McTavish before he commenced slipping; after all, we owe him something, I think."

She drew his hand suddenly to her lips and kissed it; her hot tears of joy fell on it, but her heart was too full for mere words.

"Fiddle-de-dee, Moira! Buck up," he protested, hugely pleased, but embarrassed within. "The way you take this, one would think you had expected me to go back on an old pal and had been pleasantly surprised when I didn't. Cheer up, Moira! I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll advance you two months' salary for—well, you'll need a lot of clothes and things in Sequoia that you don't need here. And I'm glad I've managed to settle the Mc-Tavish hash without kicking up a row and hurting your feelings. Poor old Mac! I'm sorry I can't bear with him but we simply have to have the logs you know."

He rose, stooped, and pinched her ear; for had he not known her since childhood, and had they not gathered huckleberries together in the long ago? She was sister to him—just another one of his problems—and nothing more. "Report on the job as soon as possible, Moira," he called to her from the gate.

Presently, when Moira lifted her Madonna glance to the frieze of timber on the skyline, there was a new glory in her eyes; and lo, it was autumn in the woods, for over that hill Prince Charming had come to her, and life was all crimson and gold!

When the train loaded with Cardigan logs crawled in on the main track and stopped at the log-landing in Pennington's camp, the locomotive uncoupled and backed in on the siding for the purpose of kicking the caboose, in which Shirley and Colonel Pennington had ridden to the woods, out onto the main line again—where, owing to a slight downhill grade, the caboose controlled by the brakeman could coast gently forward and be hooked onto the end of the log train for the return journey to Sequoia.

Throughout the afternoon Shirley, following the battle royal between Bryce and the Pennington retainers, had sat dismally in the caboose. She was prey to many conflicting emotions; but having had what her sex term "a good cry," she had to a great extent recovered her customary poise—and was busily speculating on the rapidly with which she could leave Sequoia and forget she had ever met Bryce Cardigan—when the log train rumbled into the landing and the last of the long string of trucks came to a stop directly opposite the caboose.

Shirley happened to be looking through the grimy caboose window at that moment. On the top log of the load the object of her unhappy speculations was seated, apparently quite oblivious of the fact that he was back once more in the haunt of his enemies, although knowledge that the double-bitted ax he had so unceremoniously borrowed of Colonel Pennington was driven deep into the log beside him, with the haft convenient to his hand, probably had much to do with Bryce's air of detached indifference.

Shirley told herself that should he move, should he show the slightest disposition to raise his head and bring his eyes on a level with hers, she would dodge away from the window in time to escape his scrutiny.

She reckoned without the engine. With a smart bump it struck the caboose and shunted it briskly up the siding; at the sound of the impact Bryce raised his troubled glance just in time to see Shirley's body, yielding to the shock, sway into full view at the window.

With difficulty he suppressed a grin. "I'll bet my immortal soul she was pecking at me," he soliloquized. "Confound the luck! Another meeting this afternoon would be embarrassing." Tacitly he resumed his study of his feet, not even looking up when the caboose, after gaining the main track, slid gently down the slight grade and was coupled to the rear logging truck. He heard the engineer shout to the brakeman—who had ridden down from the head of the train to unlock the siding switch and couple the caboose—to hurry up, lock the switch, and get back aboard the engine.

"Can't get this damned key to turn in the lock," the brakeman shouted presently. "Lock's rusty, and something's gone bad inside."

Minutes passed. Bryce's assumed abstraction became real, for he had many matters to occupy his busy brain, and it was impossible for him to sit idle without adverting to some of them. Presently he was subconsciously aware that the train was moving gently forward; almost immediately, it seemed to him, the long string of trucks had gathered their customary speed; and then suddenly it dawned upon Bryce that the train had started off—there it was—the jerk—and that it was gathering headway rapidly.

He looked ahead—and his hair grew creepy at the roots. There was no locomotive attached to the train! It was running away down a two per cent grade, and because of the tremendous weight of the train, it was gathering momentum at a fearful rate.

The reason for the runaway dawned on Bryce instantly. The road, being privately owned, was, like most logging roads, neglected as to roadbed and rolling stock; also it was unmanned, and the brakeman, who also acted as switchman, had failed to set the hand-brakes on the leading track after the engineer had locked the air-brakes. As a result, during the five or six minutes required to "spot in" the caboose, and an extra minute or two lost while the brakeman struggled with the recalcitrant lock on the switch, the air had leaked away through the worn valves and rubber tubing, and the brakes had been released—so that the train, without warning, had quietly and almost noiselessly slid out of the log-landing and started on its mad career. There was nothing to do now save watch the wild runaway and pray, for of all the mad runaways in a mad world, a loaded logging train is by far the worst.

For an instant after realizing his predicament, Bryce Cardigan was tempted to jump and take his chance on a few broken bones, before the train could reach a greater speed than twenty miles an hour. His next impulse was to run forward and set the hand-brake on the leading truck, but a glance showed him that even with the train standing still he could not hope to leap from truck to truck and land on the round, freshly peeled surface of the logs without slipping, for he had no corks in his boots. And to slip now meant swift and horrible death.

Then he remembered. In the wildly rolling caboose Shirley Sumner rode with her uncle, while less than two miles ahead, the track swung in a sharp curve high up along the hillside above Mad river. Bryce knew the leading truck would never take that curve at high speed, even if the ancient rolling stock should hold together until the curve was reached, but would shoot off at a tangent into the canyon, carrying trucks, logs, and caboose with it, rolling over and over down the hillside to the river.

"The caboose must be cut out of this runaway," Bryce soliloquized, "and it must be cut out in a devil of a hurry. Here goes nothing in particular, and may God be good to my dear old man."

He jerked his axe out of the log, drove it deep into the top log toward the end, and by using the haft to cling to, crawled toward the rear of the load and looked down at the caboose coupling. The top log was a sixteen-foot butt; the two bottom logs were eighteen-footers. With a silent prayer of thanks to Providence, Bryce slid down to the landing thus formed. He was still five feet above the coupling, however; but by leaning over the swaying, bumping edge and swinging the axe with one hand, he managed to cut through the rubber hose on the air connection.

REPLACE MILL

Rhineland, Wis.—A new saw mill to replace their former one which was destroyed by fire last summer, is to be erected at once by Lee Bros. of this city. Workmen are already cleaning up the debris on the mill site and actual construction will be begun as soon as weather conditions will permit. The mill will be a single band and re-saw plant with a capacity of 60,000 feet of hardwood per day or 75,000 feet of softwood.

SPRING OPENING

TOMORROW MARCH 18 to 20

Springtime with its blue skies, flashing sunshine and glad spirit of awakening life is reflected in the sprightly fashions for Milady's wear at this joyous season. To mark this gala time at formal opening from March 18 to March 20 this store will display the latest modes for spring as interpreted by designers of wide repute. Unusual attention will be given to the smart accessories upon which the success of an otherwise fashionable costume depends. The scope of this spring opening expresses the spirit of this store in its desire to give its patrons opportunities for securing authentic fashions at home. Mid so much beauty and variety the choosing of becoming new wardrobe becomes delightfully simple—and so pleasant.

THE NEW SHOES

It's the variety to this spring's offering of shoes which makes it interesting. One may be secure in the knowledge of being correctly shod for every occasion when there are endless oxfords, pumps and boots from which to choose. Soft kid pumps, cordovan oxfords, kid boots with light tops, slim satin ties, pumps—the right sort of footwear with which to replenish one's wardrobe.

THE NEW HOSIERY

There never was anything so lovely or so diversified as the many fascinating styles of new hosiery. Clocks are developed in embroidery, drop stitch and lace, forming smart accessories for a street frock or tailor. With gowns and for those times when one must be a bit more elegantly clad the lace hose is exquisite and of a gossamer texture.

SPRING SUITS

To choose a suit this spring is a pleasant duty for one can find models in tricotine that are delightfully simple, yet smartly tailored and trimmed with fine bindings of grosgrain, embroidery, braiding and fringes allow few suits to escape without their distinctive touches. While on some fine tuckings and stitchings give a more severe appearance. Skirts retain the slender silhouette, while added width is cleverly inserted in knife plaited panels. In jackets the jaunty little Eton often tops a plaited skirt. Tuxedo jackets and slight modifications are youthful in their treatment.

SPRING COATS

The day of the Polo Coat is here and certainly no one will regret its invasion of fashion for it is universally becoming. It may be developed of camel's hair or polo cloth but always it is possessed of ample patch pockets; belt and convertible collar. It is most delightfully and generously interpreted here. In justification of their sturdiness, coats of tweed assume mannish lines. Tricotine Coats, in some instances, follow suit, but most often they are cleverly flared at the hem or quite the opposite in effect—wide at the neckline. Truly in this display there is much charm.

CHILDREN'S SPRING APPAREL

No flower in a garden was ever more beautiful than the blossoms, which bloom in colorful profusion on youthful styled organdie and voile frocks. For little girls Fashion also favors trim tailored frocks of linen and percale. Among both types one finds sashes and embroideries. But even if one's frock is pretty one cannot do without a Coat so Fashion has provided hosts of adorable Juvenile Coat styles. Included are pastel tinted garments in taffetas and dozens of sturdier models in such practical colorings as brown and navy blue.

NEW TIES

Ties! There is not enough space to describe them. You will sure enjoy picking out one.

THE NEW FABRICS

Of an indescribable loveliness are the colorings and textures of the new silken fabrics, readily adaptable to gowns graceful and charming. Crisp taffetas vie with supple satins. Soft surfaced woollens in duvety and lightweight velours this season are twilled or honey-combed. In tricotine and twills one has the foundation for smart tailors. Embroidered Swisses, organdies, voiles dimities and fine linens are irresistible in their beauty and suggestion of spring days.

Be sure to see the new bags, ribbons, veils, undergarments, infants wear, umbrellas, rugs, drapery, furniture, etc.

SILK SHIRTS

We feel sure that our silk shirts will meet with the approval of all men and young men. Be sure to see them.

SPRING BLOUSES AND SKIRTS

One may select handmade blouses from France, exquisite in the fineness of fagoting, lace insertions and hand-run tucks. Oother lingerie blouses are made lovely with drawn-work done in faraway Philippine villages. Batistes, nainsook, voiles and handkerchief linens bear charming touches of individuality. In Georgette, Mignonette and crepe de Chine smart overblouses have been developed. Gay embroidery, beading and appliqued designs adorn them, making a smart costume when combined with a slim skirt of satin.

In separate skirts slender lines prevail, although entire plaited skirts or panels of plaitings give added width in many models. For sopters and general wear nothing has quite the popularity of the plaid skirt. In duvety, satin, twills and taffetas, afternoon skirts are more decorative and adapted for wear with the tuniced overblouse of filmy fabric.

SPRING MILLINERY

A marked Egyptian influence is perhaps the most interesting feature about this millinery display. It is most charmingly reflected in Hats of lemon, lotus and scarab tones. In contour, too, from the land of sphinxes many close-fitting, small modes take inspiration. Quaint and reminiscent of Victorian days are the Hats of century straw. Others of glistening liseres, sipper straw, patent leather and glittering cellophane have abruptly upturned brims and brilliant trimmings. Picture hats are developed of horse hair and malines. Typical Sports Hats are felt and ribbon modes, some of the most alluring of which are presented in jade. Taken all in all, this showing is a marvel of completeness in variety of colorings and styles.
